Singapore Management University (SMU) students viewing a model of the university's new School of Law building at the ground-breaking ceremony yesterday. The building will be constructed at the open-air car park behind The Substation along Armenian Street. The 22,000 sq m premises will house, among other facilities, the Kwa Geok Choo Law Library. It was named in memory of the late Kwa Geok Choo, wife of former Minister Mentor Lee Kuan Yew. SMU said the library, which will have a capacity of more than 500 users, will take on a 'distinct architectural form that is reminiscent of a pearl'. PHOTO: SMU
